Bishops' Conference Calls for Action on Exploitation with Support for new Prostitution Bill

The Bishops' Conference of Scotland has written to the First Minister of Scotland to express the Church's support for the Prostitution (Offences and Support) (Scotland) Bill, currently before the Scottish Parliament.

In the letter, the Bishops' Conference describes the Bill, tabled by independent MSP, Ash Regan, as "a vital step toward protecting some of the most vulnerable individuals in our society and addressing the systemic harms associated with prostitution in Scotland."

The Bill's central purpose—to reduce prostitution and tackle exploitation, coercion, and harm—is described as both compelling and necessary.

It proposes a new offence for the purchase of sexual acts, while repealing outdated laws that historically penalised those who were themselves victims. The Bill would also quash previous convictions under section 46 of the Civic Government (Scotland) Act 1982, removing what Bishop Keenan calls a "significant barrier" to rebuilding lives.

The Bishops' Conference supports the Bill's adoption of a "challenging demand" model, shifting criminal responsibility away from individuals exploited through prostitution—overwhelmingly women and girls—and onto the buyers who fuel the commercial sex market. This model reflects international best practice and aligns with Scotland's wider commitments to tackling violence against women and girls.
